Hi Bruce,

Your letter seemed to come from the heart, and speaking for myself, it made me feel more inclined to try to arrive at a solution that might work for everyone. My idea might be worth a try:

My idea is that Pierce Bainbridge would still pay the $160,000, but $30,000 of that would go to Skip, which I believe might dramatically change the dynamic. Yes, you would be getting $30,000 less, but you would be buying a great deal of peace while still getting $130,000 immediately, and while allowing Skip to share slightly in the monetary settlement.

If you give me the go ahead, I will get this latest idea run by Skip. Prior to this email, neither Skip nor anyone at PB was aware of my suggestion. Skip is not receiving a copy of this email as I do not want to offer him anything unless you agree to the proposal.
